

SUPPLYING EDUCATION

ARIC CRABB/STAFF

Sheila Jordan, above left, superintendent of the Alameda County Office of Education, looks through school supplies Tuesday. The county agency donated 150 backpacks stocked with school supplies to area homeless shelters. A homeless count taken in January by EveryOne Home found that while the number of those on the streets in Alameda County had declined since 2007, there was a surge in what the group calls the "hidden homeless" — people living temporarily with friends or relatives or who face imminent eviction and lack the resources to move to other housing. That population had grown by 168 percent since 2003, the last time the organization counted the county's hidden homeless, from 1,134 in 2003 to 3,042. Kate Hart, below left, of the Safe Alternatives to Violent Environments program in Fremont, and Dillon Campa, an intern at the Alameda County Office of Education, carry backpacks to Hart's car.

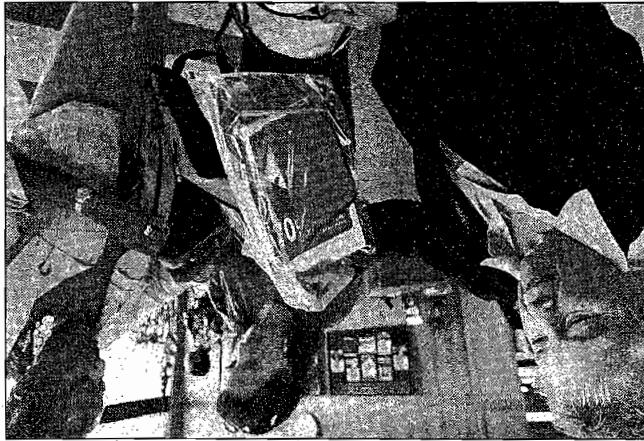

Alameda, CA
(Alameda Co.)
Alameda Times Star
(Cir. D. 7,300)

AUG 27 2009

SHEILA JORDAN, left, superintendent of the Alameda County Office of Education, looks through school supplies Tuesday. The agency donated 150 backpacks stocked with school supplies to homeless shelters in the region. A homeless count taken in January by EveryOne Home found that though the number of those on the streets in the county had declined since 2007, there was a surge in what the group calls the "hidden homeless" — people living temporarily with friends or relatives or who face imminent eviction and lack the resources to move to other housing. That population had grown by 168 percent since 2003, the last time the organization counted the county's hidden homeless, from 1,134 in 2003 to 3,042, EveryOne Home says.

ARIC CRABB/STAFF

SUPPLYING EDUCATION

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

AUG 27 2009

Pleasanton, CA
 (Alameda Co.)
 Valley Times
 (Cir. D. 42,429)

Oakland, CA
(Alameda Co.)
Oakland Tribune
(Cir. D. 152,739)
(Cir. S. 156,163)

AUG 27 2009

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

SUPPLYING EDUCATION

ARIC CRABB/STAFF

Sheila Jordan, above left, superintendent of the Alameda County Office of Education, looks through school supplies Tuesday. The county agency donated 150 backpacks stocked with school supplies to area homeless shelters. A homeless count taken in January by EveryOne Home found that while the number of those on the streets in Alameda County had declined since 2007, there was a surge in what the group calls the "hidden homeless" — people living temporarily with friends or relatives or who face imminent eviction and lack the resources to move to other housing. That population had grown by 168 percent since 2003, the last time the organization counted the county's hidden homeless, from 1,134 in 2003 to 3,042. Kate Hart, below left, of the Safe Alternatives to Violent Environments program in Fremont, and Dillon Campa, an intern at the Alameda County Office of Education, carry backpacks to Hart's car.

Pleasanton, CA
(Alameda Co.)
Tri-Valley Herald
(Cir. 5xW; 34,100)
(Cir. S. 35,600)

AUG 26 2009

Allen's P. O. B. Est. 1888

EVERYONE PREPARED

350

ARIC CRABB/STAFF

Sheila Jordan, superintendent of Alameda County schools, left, looks through backpacks Tuesday. The county agency donated 150 backpacks stocked with school supplies to area homeless shelters. A homeless count taken in January by EveryOne Home found that while the number of people on the streets in Alameda County had declined since 2007, there was a surge in what the group calls the "hidden homeless" — people living temporarily with friends or relatives or who are facing imminent eviction and lack the resources to move to other housing. That population had grown by 168 percent since 2003, the last time the organization counted the hidden homeless, from 1,134 in 2003 to 3,042.

Hayward, CA
(Alameda Co.)
Daily Review
(Cir. D. 48,575)

AUG 26 2009

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

PACKING IT UP FOR STUDENTS

ARIC CRAAB/STAFF

Kate Hart of the Safe Alternatives to Violent Environments program in Fremont and Alameda County Office of Education intern Dillon Campa carry backpacks to Hart's car on Tuesday in Hayward. The county gave away 150 backpacks full of supplies to nine different shelters.

SUPPLYING EDUCATION

ARIC CRABB/STAFF

Sheila Jordan, above left, superintendent of the Alameda County Office of Education, looks through school supplies Tuesday. The county agency donated 150 backpacks stocked with school supplies to area homeless shelters. A homeless count taken in January by EveryOne Home found that while the number of those on the streets in Alameda County had declined since 2007, there was a surge in what the group calls the "hidden homeless" — people living temporarily with friends or relatives or who face imminent eviction and lack the resources to move to other housing. That population had grown by 168 percent since 2003, the last time the organization counted the county's hidden homeless, from 1,134 in 2003 to 3,042. Kate Hart, below left, of the Safe Alternatives to Violent Environments program in Fremont, and Dillon Campa, an intern at the Alameda County Office of Education, carry backpacks to Hart's car.

