Wells Fargo Bank donated $20,000 to the Castro Valley Education Foundation on Friday.

"It's a difficult time for education," said Gary Howard, foundation president. "Our success is due to a great extent to working closely with our community partners, and this very generous donation is a great example of that cooperation."

The gift was part of a total of $250,000 given to East Bay educational foundations during a ceremony at the Alameda County Office of Education.

"I know that the contribution that we're making is the right thing," said Micky Randhawa, Wells Fargo's East Bay Market Regional President. "It will help many of the school districts go a long way in some of the programs that they need to support."
